

Notes and clefs

A clef at the start of the music help musicians communicate which particular notes should be played.

This clef is called a treble clef. It can also be called the 'G' clef because it tells us which line has the note 'G' on it.

To draw the treble clef, follow the arrows below:

Practise drawing the treble clef by tracing, and then draw some of your own.

Copy the treble clef and the note G.

Copy the treble clef and the note C.

